The Women’s Advocacy Center Names New Board Member

Memphis— February 6th, 2023 — The Women’s Advocacy Center announced that Renee Martin has been appointed as its board chair, effective immediately.

Martin, an organizational development, and human resources consultant based in Memphis, brings with her many years of HR strategy and operational business leadership experience. She has mentored foster girls, worked with a civil rights nonprofit, served on the Board of Directors for Man Up Campaign (bringing awareness and solutions to end gender-based violence) in New York City, and co-led a divorce care group for women in Memphis.

Martin hopes to help The Women’s Advocacy Center in the coming years. “The Women’s Advocacy Center has clearly grown under great care since its inception in 2018. I would find it rewarding to help the organization in its next phase to--scale up, build additional key partnerships and revenue streams, continue to refine the service model, and bring awareness to engender increased participation in support and prevention. Ultimately, positioning the organization to continue delivering on its mission of empowering and supporting survivors of domestic abuse,” said Martin.

The Women’s Advocacy Center is a faith-based 501(c)(3) established in 2018. Its mission is to empower and support survivors and victims of domestic abuse in East Shelby County, Tennessee. Donors and grants fund the organization.
